The knives were out and the fires were burning. Competing for glory were nine men. But only one could be crowned king at The Hindu Cookery King 2019.

The contest, saw men from diverse professions – students, scientists, techies and bankers – whipping up delicacies and racing against time and one other. While some entered the contest for the love of cooking, others used tried and tested recipes handed down from mother to son.

This year Sai Swaroop, an intermediate second year student was crowned The Hindu Cookery King 2019. His preparation, a Goan delicacy, was judged the best by a panel of five chefs.

The first runner-up was Abinas Nayak. A techie by profession, and inspired by cooking reality show MasterChef, his dahi macha with coconut rice preparation tickled the taste buds. And finally, P K Srivastava with his unusual pineapple mango rabri sandwich was declared second runner-up.

"I have prepared a Goan dish. I have always loved to cook. In fact, my brother is a chef. And he guides me a lot in my passion. My mother too is involved in the culinary arts," said Mr. Swaroop.

The awards were handed out by writer-director Sandeep Reddy Varma who appreciated the effort put in by all contestants.

The Hindu Cookery King 2019 was presented by Freedom Healthy Cooking Oil Range.
